The railroad commissioners met at Hartthe accident at Hartford, Dec. 21, 1802, in which two men were killed and another injured. The testimony proved that the three men were riding through a cut on a band car, and not watching in the rear, when they were struck by a train running wild. The engineer was running his train faster than the rules permit and did not give any varning before entering the cut, which was approached by a curve.

Frank E. Brigg of Brandon, Vt., Robbed On His Way Homb

A dispatch from Butland to the Hoston Journal says that Frank E. Briggs, who died Tuesday, baving just returned from Washington, stayed in New York city Tuesday, and it has leaked out that while there was robbed of all his valuable jewelry, his overcost and some money, the whole being worth about $1000. He was taken to the house of a cousin by a hackman, and were gone.

He was feeble from a long illness, and the most probable theory is that he was saud-bagged. He arrived home in a half-conscious condition, from which he never recovered, and so was not able to give the details of the robbery. His brather, Georga Briggs of Brandou, is a leading lawyer, and it is probable that legal action will be taken to find the thief.
